

Meghan Markle planning Botox treatment before Prince Harry wedding day?

MEGHAN Markle looks stunning already.

By Samantha Bartlett, Exclusive / Published 23rd February 2018

WEDDING TREATMENT?: A cosmetic expert said Meghan may opt for 'Baby Botox' before her big day

However, a leading cosmetic practitioner has claimed Prince Harry's wife-to-be may want an even more glowing appearance ahead of her big day.

Dr Nick Milojevic from Harley Street practice Milo Clinic, said the former Suits actress may opt for 'Baby Botox' – one of the biggest trends around right now in the cosmetic world.

MEGHAN MARKLE HARRY WEDDING: WILL IT BE ON TV?

Instead of traditional Botox, this treatment involve tiny doses of Botox which are injected into the usual areas of the face.

According to Dr Milojevic, the results are still very similar to when normal doses are given, but more movement is present and it does wear off more quickly."

He said: "The patient may have to return for the next treatment after two months, but in time however even with Baby Botox, the results will last a lot longer."

SPECULATION: Some experts have said before Meghan could have had Botox and her teeth refined

“Meghan might opt for the treatment of Baby Botox as it is a quick yet effective way of achieving results fast, without much recovery time needed”

Dr Nick Milojevic

Talking about US star Meghan in particular, the practitioner added: "Meghan might opt for the treatment of Baby Botox as it is a quick yet effective way of achieving results fast, without much recovery time needed.

"Baby Botox basically gives our patients the choice. If they want the normal dose treatment, we will use a unique technique to achieve very effective, long lasting but still very natural results without the frozen look.

"Baby Botox however, can be used for those patients who want to be even more minimal and more natural, or those who just don't want it to last too long."

He claimed that many brides are opting for the treatment before their wedding day due to because it is more "natural" than traditional Botox.

Dr Milojevic commented: It isn't uncommon nowadays for women to replace a facial with Baby Botox before their big day.

BIG DAY: Meghan and Prince Harry are marrying on May 19 at St George's Chapel

"This is because this treatment offers a much more natural and youthful look, which means you can get it just days before your big day."

The brunette has never talked about any plastic surgery claims but has not denied any tweaks.

Back in July last year, Dr Dan Marsh, a plastic surgeon at The Plastic Surgery Group told Express.co.uk the star may have had her teeth and hair slightly refined as well as "small amounts of Botox in her frown line, around the nose and eye area."

However, Dr Ifeoma Ejikeme, Consultant Physician at UCLH and Medical Director of Adonia Medical Clinic, said she believes Meghan is a natural beauty through and through.

She commented: "Meghan Markle is one of those iconic beauties."

LOVED UP: The royal pair met through mutual friends

Meghan and Prince Harry's wedding will take place on Saturday May 19, 2018 at St George's Chapel, Windsor Castle.

This is where Harry was christened when he was three months old.

Kensington Palace confirmed the wedding in a statement on December 15, 2017.

Meghan and Harry were introduced through mutual friends and bonded over their charity work.